Ideal as safe, family-orientated, 'Mediterranean style' cruisers full of character, the charming and visually attractive Minorchino range is enjoying its best ever period, with a healthy order book that has never been higher than it is right now.

Built to an extremely high standard by Sasga Yachts in Menorca - and riding on the crest of a recent 'Power Boat of the Year' nomination for the 34 footer - the range has been modernised and brought completely up to date by Barracuda Yacht Design, whose naval architecture and interior design skills have brought about the kind of living space and operating efficiencies that today's customer demands.

Comprising the 34ft, followed by the 42ft and the 54ft, and with a new 68ft under development, the range takes inspiration from centuries-old

Balearic fishing boats known as 'Llauts' – widely renowned for high volume hulls with great stability. Economical cruising speeds from easily driven hulls are available. Take, for example, the 34ft, where between 12 to 19 knots cruising, via twin 225hp engines, and a maximum speed of 21 knots is comfortably achievable.

Light and spacious interiors with simple, unadorned fabrics keep the mood calm and relaxed at all times. Generously proportioned aft and fore-decks, with 'walk-around' access and large swim-platforms have resulted in practical and characterful propositions for those looking for something a bit different.
